	Point of View: Traditional third person omniscient.
	Objects of Desire:
	Conscious External Want:
	Miss Marple wants to find the killer/s and bring them to justice and save the reputation of her friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bantry.
	Subconscious Internal Need:
	To restore safety to St. Mary Mead and Danemouth. Controlling Idea/Theme: Justice prevails when we stick to the facts during times of great suspicion.

BEGINNING HOOK
GINNIN HOOK	Inciting Incident (causal)	-
ID H	The dead body of a beautiful blonde girl has been found in Mr.
BB	Bantry's library and his wife Dolly has called Miss Marple for help.
	Turning Point Progressive Complication (Revelation)	-
	When Miss Marple meets the dead girl's cousin Josephine Turner, she is unnerved by Josie's saying that she was angry when Mr.
	Conway Jefferson called the police because Ruby Keane was missing from The Majestic Hotel. Josie isn't showing grief. She's showing anger towards Ruby; she doesn't seem to care for her.
	Crisis (Irreconcilable goods)
	Should Marple pursue this and help her friend unburden the suspicions that will naturally fall on her husband, or should she let the police do their jobs - but also possibly let someone with a lot of red flags (Josie Turner) get away with murder?
	Climax: Miss Marple accepts her friend Dolly's offer to stay at The	+ Majestic for a weekend of amateur sleuthing.
	Resolution: Sir Henry Clithering, aware of Miss Marple's fame as a sleuth, calls her into consultation about Ruby Keane's murder.	+

MIDDLE BUILD
	Inciting Incident (causal): News of a blazing car fire with another	- dead girl inside leads Miss Marple to think that the charred body must be that of Girl Guide (Pamela Reeves) who had gone missing around the same time as Ruby.
	Turning Point Progressive Complication (Revelation):	- Despite the investigators discovering that Mark and Adelaide are financially distressed, the investigation comes to a complete standstill because their alibis are airtight.
	Crisis (Irreconcilable goods):
	There are a few things bothering Miss Marple, things she knows about girls that the investigators don't. Should she follow her instincts or accept that the police are stalled for good reason?
	Climax:	+
	Marple follows her instincts: 1. Mark said Ruby's teeth ran down	1 her throat, but the girl in the library had protruding teeth. 2. The body in the library had chewed nails but to all accounts Ruby had her nails clipped. 3. If she went out to meet a boyfriend, a girl of Ruby's (low) class would have worn her "best dress," not the tatty white one they found her in.
	<ul> <li>Marple concludes the two girls were switched and made</li> </ul> to look like alike, providing an alibi for the murderers.
	Resolution: Marple knows who killed Ruby, but she must prove it.	+
